IMMIGRATION

I am still of the opinion, ex-pressed in my report for 1907. • that it is both practical and de-sirable to make exceptions to our • general immigration laws in fay. • of the insular possessions. Such + legislation should be based upon + a careful consideration of the + + a careful consideration of the +

+ special conditions peculiar to the +

+ several insular possessions. To + build up these islands and establish therein a thoroughly reliable + laboring elecent, it is perhaps + necessary that special measures + or special exceptions should be + made to encourage the immigra tion of foreigners. The present + law contains an exception of this + kind, in that it does not require +

the payment of head tax on ac tount of allens entering Hawaii + count of allens entering Hawaii + and Porto Rico, and there would + seem to be no valid reason for a + failure to make further excep + tions favoring immigration to + those islands.—Secretary Straus' +
